COURSE OF THIS COURSE: This one-day, 4-hour program has been designed by Tamika Lecheé Morales, President and Founder of The Autism Hero Project, to equip first responders with the foundational knowledge and real-world skills needed to recognize, communicate with, and safely support individuals on the autism spectrum. Participants will gain a deeper understanding of autism and how sensory sensitivities, communication differences, and behavioral responses can influence encounters in the field.

COURSE OVERVIEW: Students will learn critical identification techniques, non-escalation strategies, and effective verbal and non-verbal communication methods tailored to the sensory and cognitive processing differences of individuals with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). The course also features real-life stories and a video documentary produced by The Autism Hero Project in collaboration with law enforcement, illustrating the contrast between uninformed and informed responses while highlighting the profound impact that understanding, empathy, and proper training can have on safer, more positive outcomes for everyone involved.

By the end of the course, participants will have the knowledge, empathy, and confidence to apply best practices that promote safety, dignity, and positive outcomes for both first responders and individuals with autism across emergency and crisis scenarios.
