COURSE OVERVIEW: A 40-hour training course to provide instructor candidates with the core skills to train entry level personnel on essential pistol skills and conduct sustainment training for their agency. The curriculum maintains a major focus on instructor traits and teaching abilities, with numerous student teaching exercises in the classroom and range operations. Topics expand to low light training and more progressive skills to provide a well-rounded aptitude to conduct continuing training. Candidates will also be versed in related legal concerns regarding use of force and instructor liability.

The course concludes with a daylong graded student teaching exercise simulating an in-service training date. Candidates prepare written lesson plans and conduct individual blocks of instruction with a live fire range session. Each presentation is graded by peers and the course instructor. Candidates also complete a written test and firearms proficiency course of fire.

Prerequisites Required for Enrollment

The Handgun Instructor class is not a beginner's course. It is not designed to teach students new to the operation of the handgun. The content of this class is structured to qualify you to instruct others.

Students should be proficient with the functioning and use of the handgun. The completion of handgun training courses above and above minimal requirements as well as personal practice will aid your success in this class.

All students will be required to complete an initial qualification shoot on the first day of class. Students will be given two chances to successfully pass this shoot. Those who fail to pass will be dismissed from the course.

We strongly encourage you to practice this course of fire prior to the class.
